Claim Objections

Claim 4 is objected to because of the following informalities: "calibrator" should be --calibrating--. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Zuckerwar (US Patent 4,445,378).

Zuckerwar discloses an acoustic apparatus including a piston 14 for producing a sound pressure (see abstract and figure 1). The recitation "for calibrating a sound pressure level sensor" has not been given patentable weight because it has been held that a preamble is denied the effect of a limitation where the claim is drawn to a structure and the portion of the claim following the preamble is a self-contained description of the structure not depending for completeness upon the introductory clause. Kropa v. Robie, 88 USPQ 478 (CCPA 1951).

Neck 13 is considered equivalent to a high-pressure adapter as in the instant invention. It is shown in figure 1 connected to an output of the pistonphone. The neck is a $\lambda/4$ resonator as the specification recites that a $\lambda/4$ resonator is simply "a tube with a constant diameter." (see paragraph 0010) The neck is shown in figure 1 having a constant diameter. The neck may amplify the produced sound pressure. Chamber 11 is considered to be equivalent to an expanded adapter as it is shown with an opening with a sealing ring 20. The ring 20 may provide a soundproof connection to the microphone 15 which is sound pressure level sensor. The microphone 15 may be calibrated in the device.

As for claim 2, the neck 13 as shown is a tube and has a length and a constant diameter which may be designated (L) and (d).

As for claim 3, the flexible hose 17 is considered to be substantively equivalent to the mechanical compensation link, which is a simple soundproof connection between the adapter and sensor. The hose 17 would improve the soundproof connection of the neck (high pressure adapter) to the microphone (sound pressure level sensor) as in the instant invention.

Claim 4 is substantively equivalent to claim 1 as discussed above.

Claim 5 is substantively equivalent to claim 3 as discussed above.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

The additional references cited on the accompanying form PTO-892 though not cited above are provided to indicate other prior art acoustic calibration devices and methods which include one or more features or limitations in common with the instant invention.
